BILL. This result was followed by a mild sensation on the Republican side. Sepator Carter said that the vote die closed a purpose to reduce wool rates and he served notice that the day of reckoning would come when the combination would care more about other matters. It was suggested that a postponement of the wool rates take place. Forsker vehemently reinforced Carter's remarks and announced that unless the agreement that was supposed to have been reached on wool was respected every Senator must act for himself. A lison endeavored to smooth matters and milily resented the suggestion of a combination. He intimated a willingness to postpone the disputed rates, but, with a rising temper, said: "Senators are not to be driven and the Senate is not a good place to drive.
